PROHIBITING SILVER.

Having reached the point where a man is prohibited from following the bent of his own inclinations with his own property and without damage to the community, it is not remarkable that the country is called on to place silver on the contraband list. Bug money is rapidly taking the place of specie. Gold has been eliminated from circulation and loarded by the government so that the appearance now is akin to a enricelty. Gold has been retired, to use the bankers phrase, and the next step is to treat EGGS COST EIGHT silver coin in the same ruthless manner. One dollar bills are taking the place of the good old fashioned silver dollar, the dollar of our da dies, which every western man loves to the point of veneration. Penalties are being prescribed for melting up coins per dozen advancing this moraling to the complaint or using them to any way that would prevent their hoarding by this year. The wholesale selling the treasury department. Having ravished the silver mines of price today was ninety-one cents and nerv their product and rathed the saver miner of billions of money the wholesale buying price eightyduring the past larty years the nation now confesses its impotency to hold the value within the legal ratio of 16 to 1. To limit the 31 a dozen to the consumer would more-sity for Lawing more silver the coinage of dollars has been week stopped and the public are told that they must get along with But money issued from the engraver, backed by the credit of the nation. Silver his to must too valuable to be employed in a moretary seem and the government is devoting its energies to devising were of placing the nation on a strictly credit basis. In doing this the treasury departs at is simply playing second combling Britain to fill the orders of its colonies at an artificially debased price. France, the greatest user of silver outside of the Orient, is beginning to feel the effects of the improved demand for silver and the police of Paris have been instructed to arrest all persons are real in mouverting coins to base uses. There is and smouth alber in the world today to meet the commercial demand and prove should show a corresponding appreciation were the law of supply and demand permitted to take its course. Mexico has been compelled to coin a new peso containing only twelve grains and therefore the era of debasement may be said to have xet up in that country where the business conscience is rather elastic and of extremely whimsical temperament. The United States, by retiring the silver dollar, is doing even worse than the irresponsible republic across the Rio Grande for, through the substitution of rag money for good honest silver, the government is employing its power to curb production and to penalize the silver miner. The next presidential election will find that silver will be a live issue and the question of readjusting the finances of the nation so that we do not kow-tow to Great Britain by robbing the silver miner, will be one of the questions that must be disposed of by both dominant parties. At the present rate of retrogression the country will be back at the stage of greenbacks whose face value will be worth about as much as the Russian rouble or the German mark.

AN ALL YEAR ROUND ROAD.

Southern California is deploring the delay in getting action on the pr posed state highway through Antelope Valley to Mohave and then on to the Nevada state line, where it would furnish easy access to the Midland Trail via Tonopah and Ely to the eastern country. The money has been appropriated by California for this construction and the citizens of the Antelope Valley are pressing the engineering department at Washington to speed up the preliminaries of the big undertaking. Citizens of the coast cities of southern California do not seem to appreciate the importance of this work or they would join hands and influence with the people of Lancaster, the metropolis of Antelope Valley, to press construction without more ado or delay. The proposed highway is essential to the development of the numerous mountain and coast resorts as its completion means diversion of business from the Lincoln Highway leading to northern California, and the upbuilding of property interests south of the Tehachepi. For six months of the year the Lincoln highway is closed to traffic owing to the accumulation of snow on the Sierras, but the Midalnd Trail is open all year round without anything worse than local weather disturbances to interrupt traffic.
